

TEST TECHNOLOGY SYMPOSIUM

Distributed Experimentation, Testing, Evaluation, and Training

The US Army Developmental Test Command brings its annual symposium to San Diego, California. This west coast site will enable participation by key US Navy and US Air Force agencies who are making significant technological advancements in network-centric warfare. Our program will bring them together with their companion Army agencies to build and reinforce partnerships which will enable experimentation, testing, and training under the most realistic battlefield conditions; i.e., as a joint force. Developers, testers, evaluators, trainers, contractors, and academics are encouraged to come and showcase their facilities, technologies, and procedures. Attendees will hear the most current top-level DOD policy, and also results of field experiments and tests that are the building blocks of joint distributed testing. The symposium will be "capped off" with a joint service executive panel to promulgate policy and respond to conferee questions. Supporting the formal proceedings will be over 50 exhibits by Government and industry where attendees can see some of the technologies and converse with leading experts in the distributed testing field.

THE HOTEL

The Town and Country Resort & Convention Center is a resort property with 1000 guest rooms and 165,000 square feet of meeting space.
